

ABSTRACT

A portable display device and method of setting up the portable display device. The display device includes first and second panels that can fold inwardly relative to each other. The device may also include a marquee surface integral 5 with the display device that extends outwardly from the first and second panels, and a footer integral with the display device that extends away from the first and second panels. First and second bottom braces can also be integral with and movably coupled to the first and second panels, respectively.